

TOSS SALAD

By: Kelsey Vanderhoof

THE OBJECTIVE

Collect ingredients while using action cards to toss up the game. Use your collected ingredients to make some salads that will win you the most points in the end.

3-5 players

Ages 10-88

72 cards

FIRST ITERATION

My first iteration had players pass around a hand of cards and each person picked one card and passes the rest.

During this first phase there are some cards that can be played that allow different actions by the players.

Fork— pick up 2 cards during your turn instead of 1

Tongs— swap cards with another player

Spoon— take a random card from another player's ingredient stash

Toss— swap all ingredient stashes to the left

Mold— have a player skip their turn

After the gathering phase you are able to make 2 salads.

In this iteration you are able to put as many cards into a salad as you wanted.

Also if you make one of the 4 main salad you get a special card with a lot of points.

There are some cards that give you multipliers for that color.

TEST PLAYS

During my test plays the most confusing aspect was how to build your salads.

The directions were not clear enough on what could go into each salad. When i had it so you could put as many card into each salad people got overwhelmed so i felt that the change to have it be a max number in each salad would make it so people needed to try and get high value cards or to make a whole salad to get the most points.

Also people got confused and kept asking how many salads they could make so i made the bowl cards to help with that.

People also enjoyed the chaos of the action cards making the game more interactive between players so i didn't change them at all i just made the rules more concise.

THE SECOND ITERATION

In the second iteration the gathering phase is the same and the action cards are the same.

For this iteration I did change the amount of cards you can put into each salad which is now a max of 6 in each salad. You can make a max of 2 salads, this is shown by the bowl cards I have added to the deck.

THE CARDS

FUTURE

In the future i want to try and make more salads so that more people can play.

Also making more bad cards, like have certain ingredients but have them be moldy.

I also want to make a box in the future.